September 2015

What a busy start we've had to our school year. The holidays came around early this year so we had lots of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur teaching to get in right at the beginning. Our orientation day has become an annual event where new parents are welcomed and those returning are reacquainted with the curriculum and each other. With much excitement and plates of bagels and cream cheese, we met in our classrooms to learn about all the fun the new school year has in store. We progressed to the play yard for the second half of the orientation where the children explored the numerous activities available and the parents got to know each other. It's a nice way to begin the year.

We will soon be greeted by the sukkah in our yard. The children love seeing it and having lunch in it. We'll meet Rabbi Myers there and take turns shaking the lulav and taking a whiff of the etrog. Before you know it we'll meet with our Rabbi again, this time in the Sanctuary, to learn about Simchat Torah. The children love climbing up on the bimah to get a look at the open Torah, close and personal.

I hope that your year has begun as joyfully and sweet as ours at the ECLC.

B'Shalom, Vanessa
